Sandisk FQ3'26: Nosebleed ASPs (now locked in); Raise estimates and TP to $1700, Reiterate Outperform (top ST pick)

Sandisk reported FQ3'26 results yesterday after market close with a strong beat and guide. Stock was down 6% post market at time of writing on the back of +3,264% one year move.

Sandisk delivered a broad-based beat in FQ3. Revenue was up 97% to $5.95bn (vs. consensus $4.72bn), driven by ASP up a whopping 140% QoQ while slightly offset by high teens bit shipment decline QoQ. The EPS of $23.41 beat us, consensus and our bull case.

FQ4 EPS guidance is conservative and reflects new long-term agreements (LTAs). The company guided FQ4 EPS of $30-33/share, above our estimate of $25.3 and consensus of $24.06. However, guidance implies a significant deceleration in ASP change to mid-to-high teens % QoQ. We think this is due to the LTAs locking in prices reducing short term upside in exchange for long term stability, some pull forward of ASP growth in FQ2, and conservatism.

SanDisk has signed 5 LTAs in total — 3 in fiscal Q3 and 2 in Q4 — with active negotiations underway with additional customers. These account for over 1/3 of SanDisk's bits demand in FY2027, with duration up to 5 years. This should significantly reduce volatility in the price going forward. In addition, management announced a new $6bn share repurchase authorization.

Based on the strong earnings, strong guidance, company commentary and the very strong pricing environment we increase our estimates again substantially - mainly due to stronger pricing in the short-term. Our FY26 and FY27 EPS were increased to $64.73 and $200.47 (37% and 60% above consensus) respectively.

Investment Implications

We increase our target price to $1,700, still based on 11x our new 4-year through cycle (FY26-29) EPS. This implies 8.5x our FY27 EPS. Reiterate Outperform, top ST pick.

DETAILS

Sandisk reported FQ3'26 results yesterday after market close.

Sandisk delivered a broad-based beat in FQ3. Revenue was up 97% to $5.95bn (vs. consensus $4.72bn), driven by ASP up 140% QoQ while slightly offset by high teens bit shipment decline QoQ. The EPS of $23.41 beat consensus and our "Blue Sky" bull case scenario (Exhibit 2).

- The company explained that the bit decline is primarily due to building inventory to support a strong QLC (high capacity NAND) rollout in Q4 and to prepare for the new LTAs. Bit shipments should return to growth in FQ4.
- The impressive FQ3 ASP growth of 140% beat our Blue Sky Scenario of 75%. As a result, EPS came in at $23.41 (vs. consensus at $14.51), even higher than our Blue Sky estimates of $17.47 outlined in our recent note: Sandisk: How high can estimates and the stock go? Raising estimates and TP to $1,250, with blue-sky scenario at $3000.

FQ4 EPS guidance is conservative and reflects the new business model of LTAs (long term agreements). The company guided FQ4 EPS of $30-33/share, above our estimate of $25.3 and consensus of $24.06 (but below our bull case of $40.53). However, guidance implies a significant deceleration in ASP change to mid-to-high teens % QoQ. We attribute this to three reasons:

- First, some ASP growth has been pulled forward into FQ3 due to the new LTAs. SanDisk's 140% QoQ ASP growth in FQ3 significantly outperformed peers - Samsung and SK Hynix both saw smaller gains (Exhibit 1) - and we believe recently-signed LTAs are the key driver. Because these agreements lock in pricing upfront, SanDisk captured outsized ASP benefits in FQ3 that would otherwise have accrued gradually, leaving less incremental pricing upside for FQ4. Management's conservative FQ4 guide likely reflects this timing effect.
- Second, and more importantly, we view the LTA shift as a net positive despite the near-term pricing moderation. LTAs trade some incremental pricing upside for committed demand and reduced cyclicality - securing attractive economics over a longer horizon rather than maximizing any single quarter. In our view, durability of margins across the cycle is worth more than a higher ASP print in one quarter, making the trade-off clearly favorable.
- Thirdly, conservatism: Last quarter the company's guidance for FQ3 implied 50-55% ASP increase and they actually managed 140%. We believe that management is conservatively guiding as there is still a long way to go in the quarter.

Management has provided meaningful detail on SanDisk's multi-year supply partnerships, referred to as New Business Models (NBMs). These NBMs were positioned as a fundamental reshaping of the business model, aimed at reducing historical NAND cyclicality while supporting more durable, structurally higher earnings. Management also emphasized improved revenue visibility, along with more consistent margins and returns over time.

SanDisk has signed 5 multiyear partnerships in total — 3 in fiscal Q3 and 2 in Q4 — with active negotiations underway with additional customers. The 5 NBMs together are expected to account for over 1/3 of SanDisk's bits demand in FY2027, with that share expected to grow as more agreements are concluded. Contract durations vary, with the longest extending to 5 years, and volume commitments scale up over the life of the contracts under quarterly commitments and a mix of fixed and variable pricing.

The 3 contracts signed in Q3 alone represent minimum contractual revenue of approximately $42 billion, which will be disclosed in the upcoming 10-Q. Each NBM contract is secured by financial guarantees designed to protect SanDisk if customers fail to fully perform on their purchase obligations. In aggregate, the 5 signed agreements include financial guarantees exceeding $11 billion, structured as prepayments and other financial instruments managed by third-party financial institutions. Of that total, $0.4 billion in customer prepayments are already reflected on the Q3 balance sheet.

During our follow-up call, management confirmed that the $42bn RPO reflects the minimum contract value, as it is calculated using pricing floors, effectively representing a worst-case scenario. This implies that, for the same 5 NBM, the $42bn figure can only move higher from here, not lower. Regarding the $11bn, this represents walk-away fees: if customers exit the contracts, SanDisk would still collect the $11bn without delivering any product, with the proceeds flowing entirely through to gross margin.

Sandisk announced a $6bn share repurchase authorization, effectively immediately with no expiration date, marking the start of its capital return program. Management framed capital allocation priorities as: first, continue investing in the business and strengthening supply chain resiliency; second, repay debt, which is now complete; and third, return excess cash to shareholders. While they did not commit to a specific buyback cadence or percentage of FCF, management noted the business is generating significant cash, that Capex needs to remain modest relative to revenue, and that lower cyclicality from the new LTAs should reduce the need for an unusually large cash cushion over time. The implication is that buybacks should become a more meaningful use of cash going forward, but execution will remain discretionary.

Based on the strong earnings, strong guidance, company commentary and the very strong pricing environment we increase our estimates again substantially - mainly due to stronger pricing in the short-term. Our FY26 and FY27 EPS were increased to $64.73 and $200.47 (37% and 60% above consensus) respectively.

End Market
Company	Date	Comments
Everpure	2/25/2026	NAND component costs more than doubled in recent months. Implemented an average ~20% price increase across the product portfolio on Feb 9, 2026 - management noted this was the lowest increase in the industry. Q1 FY2027 product gross margins (ex-hyperscaler) expected at the lower end of the 65-70% range due to the unprecedented and sudden spike in NAND pricing. Long-standing NAND supply agreements help mitigate but do not eliminate significant input cost swings.
NetApp	2/26/2026	CEO George Kurian characterized the environment as "unprecedented inflation" in memory prices. Despite this, all-flash array revenue hit a record $1.0B (+11% YoY), annualizing at $4.2B. In response to memory price inflation, management has raised pricing and will work with suppliers to address availability and manage costs.
Dell	2/26/2026	Storage revenue $4.8B, +2% YoY, with Dell IP demand outpacing market growth. Rising memory prices are flagged as a risk to profitability in both CSG and traditional servers; Dell is managing this by adjusting pricing quickly. Potential demand fluctuations in 2H FY27 cited as a risk due to component supply constraints.
HPE	3/9/2026	DRAM and NAND now make up over half of the BOM cost of a traditional server, and this share will continue to rise. Elevated prices expected to persist well into 2027. HPE implemented DRAM-related price increases starting November 2025, shortened quote commitment cycles, and amended quoting terms with the right to reprice existing orders before shipment. Actively steering demand toward lower memory configurations where appropriate in enterprise deployments.
Microsoft	4/29/2026	Raised FY2026 capex guidance to $190B, with CFO Amy Hood citing $25B of that directly attributable to rising component costs. In the on-premises server business, increased memory pricing is adding revenue in transactional purchasing, keeping Windows OEM revenue wider than normal.
Meta	4/29/2026	Raising FY2026 Capex guidance to $135bn (midpoint, +$10bn). Most of that is due to higher component costs, particularly memory pricing.

Bernstein (Canada) Limited, Sanford C. Bernstein (India) Private Limited (SEBI registration no. INH000006378), Sanford C. Bernstein (Singapore) Private Limited, Sanford C. Bernstein Japan KK（サンフォード・C・バーンスタイン株式会社）and analysts employed by Société Générale Africa Technologies & Services to produce Bernstein research under a Global Services Agreement in place between Bernstein and Société Générale.

VALUATION METHODOLOGY

SanDisk Corp

We value SanDisk at $1700 on 11x our 4-year through cycle (FY26-29) EPS. This implies 8.5x our FY27 EPS.

RISKS

SanDisk Corp

The biggest risks to the downside on SanDisk and to our price target are that: 1) Near-term numbers look high and face cyclical downside from NAND; 2) SNDK’s disclosures and broader investor communications have been confusing, potentially dissuading more quality-focused investors; and 3) NAND weakness could extend beyond the current cycle and be more structural, in which case SanDisk’s DCF value could be structurally lower and the impaired value of its assets may be materially below replacement cost.
