Server Tailwinds and Continued Improvement in Mfg Narrative

Summary

Guidance was better than most pre-call bogeys, and the narrative on manufacturing and foundry continues to move in the right direction (consistent w/our commentary for well over a year now - here, here, here, here, here). The rapid inflection in server CPU demand has put INTC in a position to better control its destiny this year so the odds are that even the implied commentary for 2H:26 is still probably conservative and numbers still have upside. As we have said last Q and prior, the newsflow on foundry should also remain positive as the release of the 14A production design kit (PDK 1.0) late this year probably catalyzes one or more foundry deals with NVDA, AAPL (M-Series), maybe Amazon (maybe for back-end) and a high-end consumer product. As for Terafab, this is a splashy headline, but as we posed our Q to management on the earnings call, we think this is likely to be more of a technology licensing deal than a traditional foundry volume deal - so it is a validation of the process technology, but may not really help the 3rd party foundry revenue per se. The manufacturing narrative is playing out about as we expected, but we have under-estimated how much the market was willing to overlook a lack of earnings power. This manufacturing narrative should continue to improve and INTC will likely sign a number of new foundry deals, but at this price (up ~15% aftermarket and now having essentially 2x in the past month), we find it hard to create a compelling valuation upside case. Even if we account for a mega bull case, it is quite hard to get something in the $5 range and even this is several years out making it hard to see a ton of upside from ~$80 in the aftermarket though we certainly acknowledge that the foundry story will keep getting better. Net, we raise estimates with C2026/2027/2028 EPS going from $0.44/$0.75/$1.05 to $1.39/$1.95/$2.50 and our PT moves to $83 but we maintain Neutral.

Analysis/Key Highlights

- Intel reported Mar Q revenue of $13.6B, about flat Q-Q and well above the $12.7B top of guidance and UBSe/Street around $12.5B, on the back of CCG and DCAI both ~10% ahead. Gross margin beat by ~650bps (much larger than the normal beat since Lip-Bu Tan has become CEO) - partially fueled by the inclusion of previously reserved inventory. The company suggested the beat was mostly volume driven with support from the mix, but it is hard to get away from the conclusion that the 1x inventory sale was a major factor since cash gross margin stepped up a whopping ~400bps Q/Q.
- CQ2 revenue guided to ~$14.3B midpt (+5% Q/Q versus normal seasonal median of up only slightly) driven by some improvement in supply amid a very strong demand environment, particularly server CPU. By segment, DCAI was guided up >10% suggesting CCG is up somewhere in the mid single digits Q/Q. When queried, the company suggested this is still >$1B below demand (most of which seems to be server - see read through below). Gross margin guided -200bps Q/Q but when considering its normal >200bps beat that INTC usually reports, this is really probably going to be more like 41-42% which would put cash margins about flat Q/Q - more sensible given some pricing tailwinds and ongoing supply improvements.

- Full year commentary implies revenue in the ~$58B range - or ~$4B higher than Street pre-call and up >10% Y/Y. PC client (CCG) commentary was particularly notable as INTC expects revenue in 2H to only flatten off from CQ2 levels in PC TAM that UBSe (and even INTC) expects to be down fairly significantly. We don't love the optics of this as it argues that CCG sets up as a headwind now into C2027 even if the PC market comes back a bit. When queried, the company said that part of this is because customers have very low inventory levels and INTC had walked away from some of the lower segments of the market and can now better serve these markets and that units are actually down because blended pricing will be up.
- INTC suggested that it undershipped demand by at least $1 billion and in light of flat 2H:26 expectations for the CCG revenues, our interpretation is that it is largely related to the DCAI which suggests demand is ~20% above the MarQ shipments - we see a very strong indicator for the DCAI market going forward. We model DCAI revenues growing 42% Y/Y in C2026 and nearly 30% in C2027. At the same time we expect CCG to be roughly flat this year and decline 7% in C2027.
- The manufacturing/foundry message was very positive with 18A reaching target yields ~6mos faster than plan and a more full throated message that it will sign foundry deals in 2H:26-1H:27 (as we have said here, here, here, here, here) once customers receive the production PDK for 14A. When queried about Terafab, the company had little new to say other than this being part of the broader foundry strategy though we believe this is likely going to be a different model from the traditional foundry model.
- For DCAI, if we flow through the rest of the year given the guidance, it implies C2026 revenue growth of nearly 40% for the year - with 3Q and 4Q growing at 8-9% Q/Q. When queried, INTC indicated that part of this is due to price increases having run their course in the CQ2 guidance - again this all seems conservative to us and certainly suggests there could be a lot of upside to our AMD server CPU revenue growth of ~45% as AMD will likely significantly outgrow INTC this year.
- FCF was far below at a loss of $2B, driven by working capital of fully -$3.5B, almost $5B worse than UBSe and Street +$1.2B, as well as gross capex of $5B ~$500MM/$1B above UBSe/Street. Full year capex will be flat vs prior commentary that capex would be flat to down, but within this shell spending is well down and WFE is up ~25% and the commentary on C2027 was also quite bullish with the company indicating that because SPE suppliers are booked out this year, it could not really raise capex even if it wanted to do so. We model Gross Capex increasing from $18B in C2026 to $21-22B in C2027, but anticipate governmental subsidies to step down Y/Y. We do note that it is not unusual for foundry customers to enter in prepayment for the capacity which we would expect to ultimately support INTC's cash flow as capex ramps.
- INTC inventories have increased from $11.6B in 4Q to $12.4B in 1Q as the increase in WIP inventories (up $1.2B Q/Q) was partially offset by the slight decline in finished goods. Finished good inventories at 28 days are notably below ~44 days level a year ago.
- NCI was $553M, $200-300MM heavy vs UBSe $325MM/Street $258MM, but should step down sequentially to $250MM in 2Q-4Q given the Apollo SCIP exit on April 1st. Full year NCI should be ~$1.1B in 2027 and 2028, consistent with the current 2Q+ pace post Apollo, despite continuing to tool out Fab 52 in Ocotillo, AZ. For NCI, we originally expected Apollo to reduce NCI by less than what now appears to be the case (because it is a smaller deal than the Brookfield SCIP). However, the company is now clarifying that Brookfield (SCIP2) is lease accounting and even though it is a larger deal, it actually has slightly less negative impact to the P&L than SCIP1 with Apollo (thus why INTC chose to take Apollo out first). We continue to believe that INTC will find a way to also take out the Brookfield SCIP, potentially using some of the foundry pre-pays or maybe via some low cost loans that we think are still available through the prior CHIPS Act program.

Read Across

- Positive for AMD: INTC is implying it is under-shipping demand by at least $1B.

This seems mostly server-CPU related because INTC is guiding its client revenue to be only flat off CQ2 levels in 2H in a PC market that UBSe assumes declines significantly. On a server CPU base of ~$5B/Q, this implies market demand might be as much as 20% higher than what INTC can ship - very bullish for AMD since our field work in Asia suggests it has the supply to meet this upside.

- Positive for KLAC: in response to its success in adding a bit more supply, the company said "Lip-Bu brought in a lot of talent into that space to really focus on it. And we've brought in external partners that are particularly good at, including metrology, that's helped us execute better there, and we're starting to see the benefits of that this quarter." To us this is clearly in reference to KLAC, which reads favorably, and we do see KLAC also benefiting from a big uptick in capex over the coming years as INTC builds out its foundry efforts.

Valuation: PT 83 (from $65)

We raise our PT from $65 to $83 based on our SOTP valuation framework that values each business separately. We value INTC's product business on a 23x EV/EBIT multiple (average of the broad compute peer set) from prior 19x. Our framework looks at an independent valuation for Intel's manufacturing assets based on how other global foundry comps are valued per installed wafer of capacity. We value INTC's wafer capacity using a higher EV per capacity of $232 (vs. prior $220) based on the same group of peer foundries as well as TSMC (applying a 45% haircut to reflect node and yield gaps, customer stickiness, and utilization risk), and netting off the non-controlling interest (basically debt represented by the SCIP agreements for Arizona and Ireland). See Valuation and Multiple Justification.

Results: INTC reported Revenue/Non-GAAP EPS of $13.58B/$0.29 vs. UBS pre-call estimates of $12.52B/$0.06.

Valuation and Multiple Justification

We raise our PT from $65 to $83 based on our SOTP valuation framework. We value each business separately. We value INTC's product business assuming a higher normalized EBIT margin of 25% - peer average for the semiconductor group (Figure 18). We apply a 23x EV/EBIT multiple (in line with compute peers, previously 19x), and netting off the non-controlling interest (basically debt represented by the SCIP agreements for Arizona and Ireland). Our framework looks at an independent valuation for Intel's manufacturing assets based on how other global foundry comps are valued per installed wafer of capacity. We value INTC's wafer capacity using a higher EV per capacity of $232 (vs. prior $220) based on the same group of peer foundries as well as TSMC (applying a 45% haircut to reflect node and yield gaps, customer stickiness, and utilization risk).

UPSIDE/DOWNSIDE SPECTRUM

Source: UBS Estimates.

UPSIDE ($98): Based on our SOTP framework, we model Intel Products revenue to be $63.3B in CY2027E and a normalized EBIT margin of 33%, and derive $70/share for the product business. We value INTC's wafer capacity based on an EV per capacity basis (k-WSPM) of $267 and derive $22/share after netting off the noncontrolling interest (basically debt represented by the SCIP agreement for Arizona). Incorporating $1/$1 per share from Altera/MBLY contribution and $3/share from net debt generates an upside valuation of $98.

BASE ($83): Based on our SOTP framework, we model Intel Products revenue to be $60.8B in CY2027E and a normalized EBIT margin of 25%, and derive $66/share for the product business. We value INTC's wafer capacity based on an EV per capacity basis (k-WSPM) of $232 and derive $18/share after netting off the noncontrolling interest (basically debt represented by the SCIP agreement for Arizona). Incorporating $1/$1 per share from Altera/MBLY contribution and $3/share from net debt generates a base valuation of $83.

DOWNSIDE ($56): Based on our SOTP framework, we model Intel Products revenue to be $60.3B in CY2027E and a normalized EBIT margin of 20%, and derive $42/share for the product business. We value INTC's wafer capacity based on an EV per capacity basis (k-WSPM) of $197 and derive $15/share after netting off the noncontrolling interest (basically debt represented by the SCIP agreement for Arizona). Incorporating $1/$1 per share from Altera/MBLY contribution and $3/share from net debt generates a downside valuation of $56.

Company Description

Intel Corporation is the leading producer of x86-based microprocessor chips and platforms for client computing (~50% of sales), data center (30-35%), internet of things (~5%), memory solutions (~8%), security (~1%), and programmable solutions (~3%). Its products and solutions are widely used in notebook and desktop PCs, enterprise/cloud servers, communications infrastructure equipment, mobile phones and tablets, wireless and wired connectivity products, IoT, industrial, military, and automotive applications, among others.

Valuation Method and Risk Statement

Our PT is based on a SOTP analysis of the five contributing segments (Intel Products, Intel Foundry, Altera, Mobileye and All Other) each one valued using a tailored P/S multiple applied to F2026E revenues. NVDA has built a formidable moat for new compute-intensive workloads in the data center and could ultimately leverage its GPU architecture to more broadly displace INTC. New client and server CPUs from AMD also present a threat that we could be underestimating.

AMD: We value AMD based on a NTM P/E methodology. Upside risks to our AMD thesis include higher-than-anticipated penetration into cloud/data center servers and better traction in AI. Downside risks include margin pressure in the form of aggressive price competition from Intel and an inability to effectively shift production to TSMC in a timely manner.

KLAC: We use a P/E valuation methodology on KLAC. Risk to upside and downside for our universe of semiconductor and semiconductor equipment stock include macroeconomic and geopolitical environments, M&A, market share loss/gain, currency fluctuations, tax policies, amongst others. Macroeconomic conditions and a slowdown in end markets for semiconductors may lead to curtailment of spending on capital equipment and deferral/postponement of orders placed with KLAC.

Options, structured derivative products and futures (including OTC derivatives) are not suitable for all investors. Trading in these instruments is considered risky and may be appropriate only for sophisticated investors. Prior to buying or selling an option, and for the complete risks relating to options, you must receive a copy of "The Characteristics and Risks of Standardized Options." You may read the document at <https://www.theocc.com/publications/risks/riskchap1.jsp> or ask your salesperson for a copy. Various theoretical explanations of the risks associated with these instruments have been published. Supporting documentation for any claims, comparisons, recommendations, statistics or other technical data will be supplied upon request. Past performance is not necessarily indicative of future results. Transaction costs may be significant in option strategies calling for multiple purchases and sales of options, such as spreads and straddles. Because of the importance of tax considerations to many options transactions, the investor considering options should consult with his/her tax advisor as to how taxes affect the outcome of contemplated options transactions.

Mortgage and asset-backed securities may involve a high degree of risk and may be highly volatile in response to fluctuations in interest rates or other market conditions. Foreign currency rates of exchange may adversely affect the value, price or income of any security or related instrument referred to in the document. For investment advice, trade execution or other enquiries, clients should contact their local sales representative.

Investing in structured investments involves significant risks. For a detailed discussion of the risks involved in investing in any particular structured investment, you must read the relevant offering materials for that investment. Structured investments are unsecured obligations of a particular issuer with returns linked to the performance of an underlying asset. Depending on the terms of the investment, investors could lose all or a substantial portion of their investment based on the performance of the underlying asset. Investors could also lose their entire investment if the issuer becomes insolvent. UBS does not guarantee in any way the obligations or the financial condition of any issuer or the accuracy of any financial information provided by any issuer. Structured investments are not traditional investments and investing in a structured investment is not equivalent to investing directly in the underlying asset. Structured investments may have limited or no liquidity, and investors should be prepared to hold their investment to maturity. The return of structured investments may be limited by a maximum gain, participation rate or other feature. Structured investments may include call features and, if a structured investment is called early, investors would not earn any further return and may not be able to reinvest in similar investments with similar terms. Structured investments include costs and fees which are generally embedded in the price of the investment. The tax treatment of a structured investment may be complex and may differ from a direct investment in the underlying asset. UBS and its employees do not provide tax advice. Investors should consult their own tax advisor about their own tax situation before investing in any securities.

Important Information About Sustainable Investing Strategies: Sustainable investing strategies aim to consider and incorporate environmental, social and governance (ESG) factors into investment process and portfolio construction. Strategies across geographies approach ESG analysis and incorporate the findings in a variety of ways. Incorporating ESG factors or Sustainable Investing considerations may inhibit the portfolio manager's ability to participate in certain investment opportunities that otherwise would be consistent with its investment objective and other principal investment strategies. The returns on a portfolio incorporating ESG factors or Sustainable Investing considerations may be lower or higher than portfolios where ESG factors, exclusions, or other sustainability issues are not considered by the portfolio manager, and the investment opportunities available to such portfolios may differ.
